Chapter-2(Lecture Sheet)

Honesty and Truthfulness

(Lecture Sheet)

Date: 22/06/2020

Speaking the truth and following the right path is called honesty. Honesty is a quality of a good person. A person who always follows the path of honesty is called honest person.

Always speaking the truth is called truthfulness. Truthfulness is a quality of an honest person. A person who always speaks the truth is called truthful person.

Honest and truthful persons are respected by all. Even the gods and goddesses love them. The honest persons have no greed. Honesty and truthfulness are the parts of religion and morality. These are the moral virtues. We should be honest and truthful in our behaviour. We should always speak the truth. We should never tell a lie. Here is given an example of honesty and truthfulness:

There was a beautiful village named Kushia. There was a river flowing by the village. The village was surrounded by different types of trees. There lived a rich man in this village. He had three sons and two daughters. Amal was the youngest child of this rich man. Then, he was seven years old. He always played with his elder brothers and sisters. One day, they went to play in their study room. All of them started to jump on their study table. Thus, they broke their study table.

In the evening, when their father came to their study room, he came to know that someone had broken the table. At that time, among all children, only Amal said that, he had broken the table.

After hearing Amal's speech, his father didn't get angry. He rewarded Amal for speaking the truth. By speaking the truth, Amal expressed his honesty and truthfulness.

So, we should be honest and truthful in our life. Because, honest and truthful persons are always loved and respected by all.
